VICTORY IN THE AIR.

THE SPIRIT of the Democratic party in Salt Lake county and in Utah is shown by the manner in which they are getting together. No discord is apparent anywhere along the line of their return from the southern counties where he has been making speeches for the party. Judge Powers brought only good reports. He says the Democrats down there are going to do their share of the work necessary to the success of the ticket.

From James H. Moyle, Democratic nominee for governor, who is also on the stump, come similar reports. Mr. Moyle has had large and enthusiastic audiences. He has found that the Democrats are organizing for the campaign and that they are going into it with their belief in the great principles of Democracy unshaken, their hopes of victory high.

In Salt Lake county the outlook is most encouraging. The battle ground is to be here. If Salt Lake county returns a Democratic majority of several thousand votes, and it should return such a majority, the state battle will be won. We want to elect, not only the Democratic state and county tickets; we want a Democratic legislature. It is political history of Utah that the complexion of the legislative ticket elected in Salt Lake county is the complexion of the legislature. As Salt Lake county goes, so goes the state.

It would be possible, of course, for the Democrats to carry Salt Lake county for all of their nominees, and still lose the state and the legislature. But the thing has never happened in former years. No exception is looked for this year. The Democrats must carry Salt Lake county. And there is no good reason why they should not carry it. They have the better of the argument and they have the better ticket.

They are not divided into factions and clans, with every man's hand raised against his fellow. They are more united; they are aggressive. Every Democratic voter is for the Democratic ticket. The Democrats will have with them a majority of the independent voters and a liberal sprinkling of dissatisfied Republicans. With a fair field and no favor it is impossible to see how they can lose.

DEATH OF SENATOR HOAR.

AFTER AN ILLNESS extending over a period of many weeks Senator George Frisbie Hoar has passed away. Few men in American public life have been better known than Senator Hoar. From his native state of Massachusetts where he was born 78 years ago, his fame had extended to every corner of the nation. For nearly half a century he had been in public life, in small as well as in large capacity, and one will be found to say he did not serve his country to the best of his ability.

Senator Hoar had been a member of congress since 1869, as member of the house or of the senate. He was elected to the latter body in 1877 and served there continuously from that year until his death. Although he was a Republican all his life Senator Hoar commanded the respect of his political opponents and, when occasion seemed to him to warrant it, he never hesitated to criticize his people.

However, so strong was Senator Hoar's belief in the merit of party regularity that on important questions his vote was always with his party, regardless of his speeches. An ardent anti-imperialist, Senator Hoar made some of the bitterest speeches ever heard in the senate in opposition to the administration's policy. Nevertheless, whenever a vote was taken, Senator Hoar aligned himself with the administration. When his course was criticized he defended it with the statement that as a Republican it was his duty to give his vote to his party, though he reserved the right to express his individual opinions as he pleased.

It should be said to the credit of Senator Hoar that he was a man of clean and honest. No faint of wrongdoing of any sort was ever attached to him. A lawyer of the ability he possessed might have amassed a large fortune in the practice of his profession, but Senator Hoar's time was always so much taken up with public business that he had little left to give to private affairs.

For this reason and for the additional reason that he would not take advantage of the opportunity to come to him as senator to make money, Senator Hoar died a comparatively poor man. A friend who knew the state of his finances said not long ago that the senator was worth less than $20,000.

LAY THE DUST.

THE MORAL of the story in the Herald of yesterday regarding the threatened epidemic of disease caused by dust particles is sprinkled. Water shortage or no water shortage, this is a matter that the waterworks department should and must attend to at once. It will not do to say there is not enough water for sprinkling the streets. Enough can certainly be found to prevent a disease epidemic. It is not necessary to make the streets muddy. It is necessary to moisten them enough to keep the dust from blowing in every direction.

Dr. T. B. Beatty, secretary of the state board of health, traces a throat and nose disease that is widely prevalent just now directly to dust. Every citizen, old and young, is liable to it and, while it is not particularly dangerous, it is decidedly unpleasant. When it is possible to prevent even a trifling malady, and the new trouble can hardly be regarded as trifling, the necessary steps should be taken without delay.

There are other dangers in the dust also. Germs of diphtheria, of scarlet fever, of tuberculosis and other highly dangerous maladies lurk in dust. The least breeze stirs the particles up and sends them floating into the throats, nostrils and lungs of the people. It has been very fortunate for Salt Lake that last month was more than ordinarily still. This fact was noted and commented on many times during the month. Had there been much wind it is certain that the percentage of disease would have been much heavier.

This month we cannot afford to continue our reliance upon Providence. A sound old saying runs that "God helps him who helps himself." Let us help ourselves this month. Let us see to it that the streets are sprinkled, that our premises are cleaned and kept clean, that dirt and rubbish are not permitted to accumulate where they may be blown about by the idle winds, carrying disease and death as they go. Increase the number of street sprinklers, put more men to work, lay the dust and keep it laid. Prevention and prevention are worth more than all the medicine. The time to act is now.

RIGHTS OF MEN AND WOMEN.

A NEW YORK POLICEMAN has been the subject of special commendation by his superiors because he has taken it upon himself to prevent women who ride in automobiles or carriages on Fifth avenue from smoking cigarettes in public. He would be entitled to more commendation if he would extend his activities to men.

We cannot too strongly condemn the cigarette habit, but haven't women as much right to smoke them as men and boys? Men are permitted to dash down Fifth avenue in their automobiles puffing clouds of cigarette smoke. Nobody has attempted to interfere with them. Women, however, are barred. Of course it is very reprehensible for women to smoke cigarettes, in private or in public.

Few of us would care to receive as a guest in our homes a woman who would light and smoke a cigarette when the world might see her. For our own part we don't care very much for women who smoke cigarettes under any circumstances. And yet, so great is our inconsistency, men do not, as a rule, hesitate to be friendly with other men who smoke them at all times and under all circumstances. Everything, you see, depends on the point of view, or rather, on the manner in which one is reared.

In some countries women smoke cigarettes as freely as men and the practice excites no unfriendly comment. That shocks us, of course. But in those same countries a young woman is not permitted to go to a theatre, a reception, a dance, with a young man unless the two are accompanied by a chaperon. They think the liberty we allow our girls is altogether too broad.

We say we can trust our girls, and we can trust them. And we lay it down as an entirely safe general proposition that the young women of the land, the young women who are really worth while, are not going to contract the cigarette habit. The New York policeman, we are inclined to believe, acted wisely when he stopped the practice by women of smoking cigarettes in public on Fifth avenue. But we must not let this case be taken into court the question should be left to the people. As far as we are aware, there is no law which prevents women from smoking cigarettes whenever and wherever they please.

HOME FOR DRUNKARDS' WIVES.

AN IOWA MAN who died the other day left a will in which he set aside the sum of $20,000 to be used in establishing a home for the wives of drunkards. It is a pity, but it is true, that we have in this country a great many thousands of dollars of being enough to answer the purpose, even in a comparatively narrow district. It is enough, however, to do a great deal of good.

If a man who drinks whiskey to excess has a spark of manhood in him it should certainly be fanned into a flame by the thought that his wife is in danger of being provided for at the expense of some one else. There are men, of course, who are so much lost to all sense of decency that they are perfectly willing to let their families be taken care of by strangers. This class, fortunately, is in the minority, even among inebriates.

This sad curse for all men is to let whiskey alone. The plea that an occasional drink is helpful, rather than harmful, is specious. No man can say how long he will be able to resist the temptation to drink more and more until he unites himself for all useful work.

Indiana domestics have organized a union. Wonder if that will help those who are willing to pay any amount of money to secure competent household help.

The report that Bishop Potter of New York has become a member of the Bartenders' union has been denied. Still, we understand the good bishop knows how to mix a pretty fair cocktail.

An afternoon contemporary seems to think Miss Nannie Tutt, the singer, comes from Provo. We insist that the credit for Miss Tutt must not be taken from Ogdenville, where it belongs. Besides, Brother Smoot hails from Provo.

The Alabama militia company that failed to protect two negroes from a mob is to be disbanded. Soldiers that fall when their test comes certainly have no business being in the line. And it doesn't help matters any when we remember that if this Alabama company had been protecting white men from a negro mob it would not, in all probability, have failed.

It is announced that in the event of President Roosevelt's election, Secretary Hay is to remain in the cabinet. If this statement is intended as an argument in favor of Mr. Roosevelt it is likely to work the other way. A great many people in this country believe Richard Olney of Massachusetts would make a first class secretary of state again.

Senator Fairbanks yesterday refused to let his picture be taken while he was standing beside an enormous pumpkin at the county fair. We don't blame him. Everybody would have said the picture was a representation of a splendid collection of pumpkins. And we are willing to lay a small wager that frost gathered on that pumpkin while the candidate was in its vicinity.

Roosevelt at Fault.
(Mobile (Ala.) Register.)

Suppose a man should find a field of dry flax and thoughtlessly cast a firebrand into it. That is what Mr. Roosevelt did. Do you believe it? How else will you account for the facts? When the history of the south has been such a carnival of hideous deeds committed by negroes, and such almost complete indifference on the part of the adopted his attitude of equality toward the negro? What other explanation can be given to this sudden appearing frenzy? We leave it to any thinking man to answer. In our opinion—a sober, carefully considered opinion—Mr. Roosevelt is the author of these woes.

Bryan was a Leader, All Right.
(Boston Herald.)

With all his faults—and we have never ceased to comment upon them—Mr. Bryan possessed the rare quality of leadership which made men turn to him instinctively, and led hundreds of thousands, and perhaps millions, to implicitly trust him. So long as he was the recognized head of the party organization it had at least leadership, even though their leader led his followers into the sloughs of error and the swamps of economic delusion.

The Farmer Vote.
(Dallas (Tex.) News.)

As the campaign progresses it becomes apparent that the effort of the two great political parties this year will be to secure the vote of the farmer. Naturally the farmer is a Democrat. Here and there is an exception, but the rule is the rule. Canadian border war protection against American eggs and the like, and the Republican party gives it to them. But where no special benefits are given the farmers, and where, in the north, they are relieved of either the original or inherited prejudice growing out of the war, they are inclined toward Democratic ideas. And this year they are to be approached by both parties in a way most complimentary to them.
